PAC MAN

The arcade game—the name comes from Japanese slang for “chomp”—quickly eats up $1 billion in quarters in its first year, and even inspires a Top 10 novelty hit, “Pac Man Fever” and partner A.E. Hotchner wrote in their book Newman's Own. “Fortunately, we don't know any of them”

208 / Pritikin diet
The Pritikin Program for Diet and Exercise—which advocates straight-from-nature foods like fruits, vegetables, beans and brown rice—sells 10 million copies

211 / Family Ties,
a sitcom about '60s liberals trying to raise their young Republican offspring, makes Michael J. Fox a star

212 / Gravity boots
Special footwear that allows users to hang upside down—the better to improve posture and blood flow to the brain, allegedly—are a (very brief) trend

213 / Deely Bobbers
Goofy, alien-looking antennae, with little balls on the end, are selling at the rate of 10,000 a day

214 / “I'm Larry. This is my brother Darryl. This is my other brother Darryl” Newhart, starring, conveniently, Bob Newhart as a Vermont innkeeper surrounded by quirky locals, premieres and will run for eight years. In an inspired finale, he wakes up in bed, looks over and sees Suzanne Pleshette, his wife from his earlier The Bob Newhart Show. “Honey,” he says, “you won't believe the dream I just had”

215 / Falklands War
erupts. Argentina stakes a military claim to South Atlantic islands that Great Britain has claimed for 150 years.
